Seminar Details:

The California Department of Toxic Substances Control adopted the federal regulations in 1998 addressing hazardous waste emissions. This seminar will discuss the regulations of volatile hazardous waste as well as provide examples of the different types of regulated equipment. The regulations address the storage and transfer of volatile hazardous waste. Large quantity generators of RCRA hazardous waste are specifically subject to these requirements.

The types of hazardous waste subject to emission controls are volatile organic containing wastes such as flammable liquids, spent solvents and similar wastes. The rules specify emission controls, leak detection and the monitoring of hazardous waste tanks, vents, containers, piping, control devices, and other hazardous waste management units. Record-keeping requirements apply and will be discussed during the seminar.
