H1N1 VACCINE AVAILABLE EXPANDED HOURS

Many community health centers throughout San Diego County are offering evening and weekend vaccination clinics for people who want to get protection against the H1N1 virus, the County of San Diego Health and Human Services Agency is reporting today.

“We are working closely with our community partners to vaccinate as many people as possible in the high-risk groups,” said Wilma Wooten, M.D., M.P.H., County Public Health Officer. “The more people that have immunity against the H1N1 virus, the less impact this pandemic will have in our communities.”

County residents in the high-risk groups who don't have a primary care physician or whose doctor did not order H1N1 vaccine are encouraged to get vaccinated during these expanded clinic hours. The H1N1 flu vaccines will be available to people in the high risk groups, established by the CDC. This includes pregnant women, household contacts of infants less than 6 months old, children and young adults 6 months to 24 years of age, adults 25-64 years old with chronic medical conditions, and health care workers.

The following clinics are scheduled today and tomorrow. Hours are contingent upon vaccine availability.
