

After twenty-two years as a registered nurse, Joan Brady finally achieved her life-long dream of becoming a published author. Today, she is an internationally recognized writer and lecturer. In addition to her novels, she has contributed numerous articles to professional journals, and is frequently asked to speak to a wide variety of groups and organizations. Her presentations are peppered with a dry sense of humor, and emphasize personal growth and introspection.

Brady's best-selling debut novel, "God on a Harley" (Pocket Books, 1995) was translated into seventeen languages around the world. Entertainment Weekly called it, " 'The Bridges of Madison County' meets 'The Celestine Prophecy' meets 'Self Magazine' ". Film rights to this inspirational story were sold to Mimi Polk Gitlin, producer of the classic block-buster, "THELMA AND LOUISE".

Since the success of her first novel, Joan has developed a large and loyal following in the Latino community. Consequently, she has penned an additional five more novels, all of which are best-sellers throughout Spain and Latin America. A seventh book called "Los Amantes de Gibraltar" is due out in May of 2009.

Brady describes her latest work of fiction, entitled, "The Ghost of Mount Soledad", as a 'Girl-Meets-Ghost, Love story'. She plans to self publish it in English later this year.
