TRENDS & SUGGESTIONS

According to regional data from the City of San Diego Open Data Portal and county public health trends, during the fall months, the EMS system experiences a distinct shift in 911 dispatch volume driven heavily by regional weather changes and seasonal transitions.

There tends to be a surge in heat-related illnesses triggered by late-season Santa Ana winds, severe respiratory distress from dry air and wildfire smoke, and a high baseline of traumatic injuries from falls and cardiac emergencies. Additionally, shorter daylight hours and changing weather conditions contribute to an increase in traffic collisions.

Based on these trends, and the impending threat of El Niño, it's suggested to do more community outreach and education around the following topics:

- EL NINO PREP WORKSHOPS
- HEAT RELATED ILLNESS PREVENTION
- HEART ATTACK & STROKE AWARENESS
- FALL PREVENTION WORKSHOPS
- E-BIKE & PEDESTRIAN SAFETY
- RESPIRATORY DISTRESS AWARENESS
