Background

When Proposition 63 passed in November 2004, it became a California state law called the Mental Health Services Act (MHSA). The County of San Diego began implementation of MHSA funding in 2005 by expanding mental health programs. Children, Youth, and Families (CYF) enhanced mental health programming via a Full-Service Partnership (FSP) model that offers integrated and coordinated services with an emphasis on whole person wellness and increased access to medical, social, rehabilitative, and other community services, as needed.

An FSP program provides all necessary services and supports to help clients achieve their behavioral health goals. Clients can access designated staff 24 hours a day, seven days a week. FSP services comprehensively address client and family needs with a “do whatever it takes” approach. This includes intensive services and supports, and strong connections to community resources with a focus on resiliency and recovery.

The CYF FSP programs offer ancillary support(s) when indicated, provided by case managers, substance use disorder (SUD) counselors, or certified peer specialist. Services offered are trauma-informed, with a recognition that a whole person approach is critical to promoting overall well-being. Emphasis on partnership with the family, natural supports, primary care, education, and other systems working with the family is a recognized core value.

FSP providers collect client and outcome data using the California Department of Health Care Services (DHCS) Data Collection and Reporting (DCR) System. The DCR system allows for data and evaluation to be done regarding the effectiveness of FSP services being provided and the achievement of outcome measures.
