- Dean Seadoto, a community member in recovery and a stakeholder at addiction treatment centers, shared his efforts to open a primary outpatient program in San Diego.

- Paul Dunlap, CEO of For Better Brains, highlighted the nonprofit's work addressing gaps for individuals with severe mental illness, such as providing basic resources and transportation. E- Comments:

- Mary Jo O'Brien thanked the Board for hosting the Peer Voices Roundtable and asked how feedback from peers would be implemented. She also announced an open Peer Council seat for the substance use community and emphasized the importance of peer voices.
- Becky Rath suggested the Board communicate risks of marijuana business expansion to the Board of Supervisors. She cited research linking high-potency cannabis to psychosis, anxiety, and suicide risk, and expressed concern about impacts on youth, rural communities, and vulnerable populations.
- Megan Stuart welcomed new board member John Byrom, highlighting his leadership and community commitment. She emphasized that substance use prevention is central to behavioral health promotion, highlighting the long-term benefits of prevention investments.
- John Brady, with Lived Experience Advisors, raised concerns about mold in affordable and supportive housing. He mentioned that local physicians cannot diagnose mold-related illness, limit available data and potentially impacting low-income residents disproportionately.

She requested clarification on how input from the Peer Council and community sessions is being reported.
