Dear Miss Smith:

How many times do we have to hear about the massive housing shortage in San Diego before someone gets out of the way and lets someone do something about it? Talking about a problem constantly is not actually a solution to that problem. A solution is a proposal like Newland Sierra that is well thought out, provides a great variety of housing options with a commercial hub and transit options, and is in an area that definitely is short on housing. The Newland Sierra project shows good planning and forward thinking and we need it now. This is the kind of project we need to be encouraging so that workers in San Diego can own a home and be part of the American Dream again.

I-151-1

Sincerely,

Ed Gallo
