This looks all well and good. So what is it going to cost us? I'm not convinced that California's efforts will put a dent in the emissions problem. Just drive down to TJ and smell their cars. This is just another reason to get out of California!!!!

The County acknowledges concern about the cost of the CAP and the overall effectiveness of the plan. Relative costs of each of the GHG Reduction Strategies are presented throughout the Draft CAP. Final implementation costs would be determined in an incremental fashion as funding is identified and allocated to specific reduction strategies. Regarding, the effectiveness of the plan, as described in Chapter 5, Implementation and Monitoring, of the CAP, the CAP would be adaptively managed to ensure that the effectiveness of the reduction strategies would meet adopted targets.
