Communication Summary

Dudek biologist Callie Amoaku discussed the habitat types of wintering burrowing owls with Ms. Wisinski, a Conservation Program Specialist with the San Diego Zoo Institute for Conservation Research. She explained to Ms. Amoaku that burrowing owls utilize a variety of different habitat types during the winter compared to more selective habitat types during their breeding season. She also explained that in 2019, she observed a delayed onset of breeding further into the spring of 2019 compared to previous years, which supported an observation of a burrowing owl in early April 2019 but no further observations that year.
