Breaking up East County into 3 separate voting districts extending all the way to the coast doesn't make sense. Everything from zoning, housing, rents, public services, are completely different for coastal cities in the County to the more rural foothill communities . It would make more sense to split the county with longitudinal rather than predominately latitudinal lines, with the coastal communities to the west sharing representatives and the rural/agricultural communities to the east sharing representatives. It's no surprise that this is exactly how people have settled and populated this area for thousands of years.
