Spring Board scenario #2 gets to the heart of the matter. This map is the only one you have showing the perspective from the east County. The east County rural region is a multiplicity "communities of interest": agriculture, farming and ranching, the areas of biodiversity and land conversation, multiple species preservation, native-American communities, recreation and wilderness escape for city dwellers, tourism and historical preservation. We are united on a north-south axis not east-west. All of your other maps draw lines of latitude east dividing up this north-south connection. This map now makes us whole. Good job!
