I have lived in east county since immigrating her in 1980. There are 3 Chaldean churches throughout El Cajon. One in Rancho San Diego and two in El Cajon City. I came from a country where a Christian had no voice. By redistricting you are again taking away the voices of the Chaldean community. You are dividing us once again. Many Chaldeans either live, go to school, work, or own businesses throughout East County. East County residents need their own representatives .

East County deals with many issues that most people who live in San Diego know nothing about. A representative from an urban area has no idea about what we as a community have to deal with on a daily basis. We would have no fair representation. East County as a community deals with blackouts and fires regularly. We come together and know what needs to be done to help our neighbors.

In conclusion. There was no significant population change according to the census. Any proposed redistricting would violate our Voting Rights. We would not have representation. If the board goes with breaking apart El Cajon from the rest of East County. This would seem to the community this is an intentional act to separate us and take away our representation. STOP THE GERRYMANDRING!
