Having watched the meeting held just last week, I was concerned that the issues and needs of Escondido were not addressed. Often Escondido gets lumped with the East County areas when we have very little in common with the Eastern most areas of San Diego County. Escondido has been changing and becoming less of an agricultural area and more of a urban area. Many agricultural areas have been sold to developers for large housing developments, our business and technology district have been growing. We have a large blue collar work force, many of which have to travel on both State Route 78 and Interstate 5. Our needs in regards to public transportation have increased. Our city is most aligned with the cities of San Marcos, Vista, Oceanside and Carlsbad. I feel strongly as many of us who live in Escondido that Escondido must be combined with the 78 corridor cities to have our needs be addressed and not be lost in the East County where their interests are much different.
