My name is Lisette Muro and I am a resident of Fallbrook. San Diego County continues to grow and so does North County. However, there is a difference between coastal and rural North County when it comes to resources, government types, and economic focuses. While coastal cities are focused on retaining their coastal charm, Fallbrook and other areas in the rural parts of the county are focusing on preserving their rural character. Our lands are full of forests and ranches, not urbanization. Up here, whether you ranch and farm or simply just cherish the region's outdoor heritage, we all want to preserve what's so special about San Diego's backcountry. Furthermore, our communities commute, live and work around the 76, not the 78. Unlike many of our friends and neighbors to the south and west, we tend to travel east in San Diego County's backcountry and north to Riverside County for community, recreation and faith. Our interests do not align with the urbanized cities of coastal North County. Please, keep Fallbrook, Bonsall, and other unincorporated areas of North County with rural East County and empower our voices to preserve the beauty of San Diego County's backcountry.
